WHAT IS LIFE INSURANCE?—It is the exercise of prudence, of benevolence, 2. It secures independence, domestic happiness to the widow and orphan. 3. It more than compensates for losses in respect to the moral and domestic comfort of the people, and in its tendency to reduce taxation, by its reduction of pauperism, and possibly of crime, that the legislation of our wisest statesmen, and if universally adopted, would be a national blessing. 4. It affords to persons of every class, and in every station of life, the means to avoid much future misery to their families, and to render them independent of public or private charity.

While it is the manifest and imperative duty of every parent, during his life-time, to embrace all honorable means of supporting and advancing the interest of his offspring, so it is equally his duty to avoid leaving them at his death to grope their way in helpless poverty through an uncharitable world; and equally apparent is the duty of every husband to provide, in case of his death, for the surviving widow. To effect all which Life Insurance Companies have been formed, which enable every husband and parent, by the payment of a small sum, either annually or quarterly, to provide for his widow and fatherless children.

Central College.

Mr. Editor: Knowing as I do, the interests you and your readers take in our educational enterprise, I feel assured you will be glad to know of the favorable prospects which cheer us in the hope of soon realizing our long cherished desires.

Our recent unexpected and trying difficulties, have quickened the interests of our friends, and from indications already given, we confidently hope soon to announce arrangements of a prominent and satisfactorily character.

Dr. T. N. Cockerell has secured the sum of five thousand dollars to the endowment of the College, and gives name to a professorship, and requires the right to ten-scholarship for twenty-five years each, and designs them for the benefit, 1st of his own descendants. 2d Candidates for the Christian ministry. 3d Indigent young men.

A noble charity! and all honor is due to the Christian intelligence, and liberality which deserves such things. How can a Christian man of cultivated mind and heart, more appropriately bear his testimony to true Christian friendship, than by thus permanently connecting his name with a noble, public and enduring Christian institution?

How can he more appropriately bestow a part of the means which a beneficent providence has entrusted to his stewardship, than by opening a stream of charity—true charity, which will flow on, and on after he has gone to the spirit land? It will be said of such, and tangibly manifested too, "They being dead yet speak."

We indulge good hope of equally liberal action, by a few others who are abundantly able and are there not many more who ought thus to act?

P. M. PINCKARD.

THE PRINCE OF WALES VISIT.—We have noticed suggestions, both in the English and American papers, that the Prince of Wales and heir apparent to the British throne should visit the United States after having paid his contemplated visit to Canada. The New York Albion has some judicious remarks on the subject, in which there is much truth. The editor hopes the Prince will not visit us unless he can come in the strictest incognito, in which way it would tend to a closer and warmer political union between us and Great Britain hereafter. But, coming as the Prince of Wales and future King of Great Britain, his public reception would become the duty of State or Municipal officers, whose civilities could not be declined, while "the social attentions would be proffered by people whose wealth, and whose desire for edat, would be their only qualifications for the positions they would assume." The Albion asks whether the Prince would, in such a case, "learn anything of the characteristic traits of the people who have made this country what it is." "He would come in contact on the one hand with professed politicians —a few of the higher grade, but the great mass of them of the lower—and, on the other, he would be cooed around by a set of people, the most of whom are equally rich, ill-bred, ignorant, and frivolous." The people of the highest social culture, the writer thinks, would shrink from proffering their hospitalities; and the royal stranger would either fall into the hands of social Philistines, or else great and enduring offence would be given. "As to government, state, and municipal officers," continues the Albion, "will any man in his senses maintain that they represent the highest intelligence, culture, and worth of this country, or even the average level of respectable people of all classes and callings?"
